Dear Sir Christopher,

In your deliberations about MPs and their remuneration, I feel there is one principle that must be upheld. Indeed, it might be termed an injustice that must be righted.

MPs should be subject to the same taxes as the general public. No exemptions for Capital gains, benefits 'in kind' or pension privileges.

As MPs lay taxes on us, they should bear the same burdens. In fact, they should want to pay a fair share.

Yours faithfully,
D J Campbell
